Only a few specific partitions that I want to encrypt with TrueCrypt. I don't want to store the encrypted data on the Cloud because it is just a bit annoying to me. If I am able to do this, what files and folders do I have to encrypt so that TrueCrypt can be properly installed? A: The TrueCrypt installer is a MS-DOS executable, so yes you can run it on Vista. But note that TrueCrypt will require a certain amount of disk space on the machine which is used for storing the ciphertexts. If you don't care about that space (because you are going to use the backups, you could just run the program as admin user) then you don't have to store the encrypted data on the cloud. Just encrypt your files and then backup the disk image into a zip archive. Then later, when you need to restore a backup, simply extract the archive and run the TrueCrypt installer on the resulting folder.
